Miss Schoonic, Director

It is said that the Ninetcenth Con-fury was the age of the novel, and the Twentieth is of the play. At any rate, a new era of dramatic art has been cetablished, and a new class of playwrights have come before the world.

Perhaps the most striking is Lord Dun-sany, the young Irish peer, whose title extends back over fourteen generations,

He deserves the title of nobleman, for his early rigid training in clean living in Dunsany Castle, when he was not even permitted to read the newspapers

-gave_a vigorous tone to his mind, wonder and despair of his contemposhots, cricketers and horsenien in Ireland, but is best of all, a good man and a soldier. His plays are the plays of especially in Now York, and the one to

OUR HOME GARDENS.

We are all busy these bright Spring days, but some of us have a way of sarrying with us a silver cord, and weaving into our lives the joy of growing things, lifting our work from mental drudgery to that of the artist's point of view. I think I have said, over and over again, that it is a blessed privilege to create and beauti-Ty a home; it is a work in which we find a devine thought that makes the heart bound. There is no work broader than the making of a home, and the whole world responds to the Home, Sweet Home of Howard Payne.

There are many demands in the home. varied as are the needs of humanity. and to sweeten the labor necessary for the keeping of the home we must have an outlook that will produce an uplifting joy; our surroundings must take it out of ourselves. Nothing will more surely do this than a well kept lawn, with trees, plants and vines. Work has been done to quite an extent by women and children, but many homes are pining for the same thing, for a generous taste for those surrounding influences that lift us out of the rut of drudgery and make life better, stronger and happier for each and every member of the family. With this purpose in view I decided to take up the work that can be done on a lawn and garden by a woman. ### DUCK RAISING,

By G. E. Conkey.

With all the present cry for more poplity to feed ourselves and our al- called for next Saturday to see if they lies, with all prospects pointing to higher prices for fowl of all kind than we have ever known, I want to direct your attention to a branch of the poultry industry which has never been fully appreciated. I refer to duck raising. Duck raising is a very profitable occupation. Ducks are easier to man- mill on steam power. age than chickens, have fewer diseases and mature more quickly. It takes good rouse and proper attention to details, however, to make a success of the business.

While ducks are raised chiefly for ment, their eggs are valuable food, spring. Ducks eggs are large and always command from five to ten cents more than been an objection can be climinated. Ducks are usually hatched and brood.
